Carter's Open-Ended Inaugural Address

inaugural address outlines a pattern or at the very least gives a strong hint of what an incoming Administration will seek to do.

Franklin D. Roosevelt launched the New Deal in 1933.

Harry Truman revised it to the Fair

John F. Kennedy envisioned a New Frontier in 1961.

Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed the Great Society in 1965.

Although Dwight D. Eisenhower refrained from adopting a specific slogan in 1953 as did Richard M. Nixon in 1969, their maiden speeches plainly called for a pullback from the economics of the New Deal, the Fair Deal and the Great Society.

The Watergate shambles left Gerald R. Ford no opportunity to offer any point of departure but an effort to restore public confidence in government. Borrowing heavily from the Bible, the prophet Micah in particular, Jimmy Carter mixed hope and caution in these words: We have no new dream to set forth today, but rather urge a fresh faith in the old dream. And toward the mid-point in his

Freedom House, a privately supported institution with an interest in promoting democratic ideals, has been keeping score the last five years on the state of democracy in the world. By its measurements, at least, there is no cause for celebrating.

In its first survey five years ago, Freedom House estimated almost one-third of the world's population, or more than one billion people, were free. Now it estimates only 790 million people, or about 19 per cent of the population, can be called free. There is some comfort in being part of the minority in this equation, but the trend is in the wrong direction.

Certain Benefit

We can not afford to do everything, nor can we afford to lack boldness as we meet the future. So together in a spirit of in-dividual sacrifice for the common good, we must simply do our best."

Threading the entire speech is the call for greater reliance upon a rekindling spiritual strength throughout the country.

The speech reads even better than it came through on the radio and television and upon a second reading contrast between the self as surance expressed by Roosevelt. Truman and Johnson against the caution phrased by Carter grows more pronounced.

Read from the positive side, the message says in somewhat Sunday School language the public cannot expect Washington to perform the miracles which Roosevelt, Truman and Johnson promised the people could take for granted.

Negatively, the address can be written off as deliberately vague because in the view expressed by one opinion pollster prior to the inauguration, those voting for Carter will not fault him if miracles are not forthcoming because they did not expect him to produce them in any event.

A fairer assessment is to describe the address as setting a tone for how government should do what appears to be needed to accomplish.

In framing his speech as he did, Carter displays an astuteness lacking in some of his predecessors.

Johnson sketched out the Great Society as a game plan free from flaws only to see it flounder miserably evenbefore his fatal commitment to the Victnam venture.

Thus far, Carter has carefully avoided making promises or advocating going for the home run without first trying to put some men on base by

Some of his diehard opponents cor tend that Carter is reminiscent of the coach who, asked what his game plan would be to stop a monster aggrega-tion next on the schedule, replied he would have to see the enemy in action and then adjust accordingly

We prefer to feel or certainly so hope that Carter realizes there are no simple answers, that just measuring out the problems is an art unto itself; and that it is a fraud on the people to offer solutions before knowing what are the questions.

The inaugural address took that

It is true that it remains possible for a President to be elected with an electoral college majority but a minority of the popular votes. On those grounds alone many reformers would go to the direct presidential ballot.

Even a thoughtful person who weighs all sides might agree, but first he would consider:

In a popular election, the federal government of necessity would standardize voting requirements and procedures, including those still determined by the states - such as voter residency requirements, types of ballot, requirements for third party and independent ballot listings, party rules, etc.

Candidates naturally would spend their campaign time in areas of their strongest support, hoping to build up the largest possible plurality in those areas. A proliferation of candidates might result if the obstacle of carrying a state and its electoral votes is

The founding fathers did not erect the electoral college to be spiteful. Some of their reasons are still sound.

Carter's Open-Ended Inaugural Address

Presidential Customarily inaugural address outlines a pattern or at the very least gives a strong hint of what an incoming Administration will seek to do.

Franklin D. Roosevelt launched the New Deal in 1933.

Harry Truman revised it to the Fair Deal in 1949. John F. Kennedy envisioned a New Frontier in 1961.

Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed the Great Society in 1965.

Although Dwight D. Eisenhower refrained from adopting a specific slogan in 1953 as did Richard M. Nixon in 1969, their maiden speeches plainly called for a pullback from the economics of the New Deal, the Fair Deal and the Great Society. The Watergate shambles left Gerald R. Ford no opportunity to offer any point of departure but an effort to restore public confidence in government.

Borrowing heavily from the Bible, the prophet Micah in particular, Jimmy Carter mixed hope and caution in these words:

'We have no new dream to set forth today, but rather urge a fresh faith in the old dream.

And toward the mid-point in his

Freedom Is Slipping Away

That a large part of the world simply is not a very nice place, by the standards of free men, is a conclusion simply documented. Unfortunately, in recent years it hasn't been getting any

Freedom House, a privately supported institution with an interest in promoting democratic ideals, has been keeping score the last five years on the state of democracy in the world. By its measurements, at least, there is no cause for celebrating.

In its first survey five years ago, Freedom House estimated almost one-third of the world's population, or more than one billion people, were free. Now it estimates only 790 million people, or about 19 per cent of the population, can be called free. There is some comfort in being part of the minority in this equation, but the trend is in the wrong direction.

Certain Benefit

Dental braces do a marvelous job of strengthening an orthodontist's necessarily better, that even our great nation has its recognized limits, and that we can neither answer all questions or solve all problems. We can not afford to do everything, nor can we afford to lack boldness as we meet the future. So together in a spirit of individual sacrifice for the common good, we must simply do our best.'

Threading the entire speech is the call for greater reliance upon a spiritual throughout the country.

The speech reads even better than it came through on the radio and television and upon a second reading the contrast between the self assurance expressed by Roosevelt, Truman and Johnson against the caution phrased by Carter grows more

Read from the positive side, the message says in somewhat Sunday School language the public cannot expect Washington to perform the miracles which Roosevelt, Truman and Johnson promised the people could take for granted.

Negatively, the address can be written off as deliberately vague because in the view expressed by one opinion pollster prior to the inauguration, those voting for Carter will not fault him if miracles are not forthcoming because they did not expect him to produce them in any event.

A fairer assessment is to describe the address as setting a tone for how government should do what appears to be needed to accomplish.

In framing his speech as he did, Carter displays an astuteness lacking in some of his predecessors.

Johnson sketched out the Great Society as a game plan free from flaws only to see it flounder miserably even before his fatal commitment to the Vietnam venture.

Thus far, Carter has carefully avoided making promises or advocating going for the home run without first trying to put some men on base by

Some of his diehard opponents contend that Carter is reminiscent of the coach who, asked what his game plan would be to stop a monster aggregation next on the schedule, replied he would have to see the enemy in action and then adjust accordingly

We prefer to feel or certainly so hope that Carter realizes there are no simple answers, that just measuring out the problems is an art unto itself; and that it is a fraud on the people to offer solutions before knowing what are the questions.

The inaugural address took that

somewhat shortsighted in locating the faults of the one they would substitute. That is true of the electoral system of presidential election, about which so many harsh words have been written.

It is true that it remains possible for a President to be elected with an electoral college majority but a minority of the popular votes. On those grounds alone many reformers would go to the direct presidential ballot.

Even a thoughtful person who weighs all sides might agree, but first he would consider:

In a popular election, the federal government of necessity would standardize voting requirements and procedures, including those still determined by the states - such as voter residency requirements, types of ballot, requirements for third party and independent ballot listings, party rules, etc.

Candidates naturally would spend their campaign time in areas of their strongest support, hoping to build up the largest possible plurality in those areas. A proliferation of candidates might result if the obstacle of carrying a state and its electoral votes is removed. The founding fathers did not erect the electoral college to be spiteful. Some of their reasons are still sound.

Congress Already On Its Guard

Jimmy Carter may be in for more trouble from Congress than he realizes

Even from his friends — and most certainly from the Democratic majority.

A Senate-ordered study utiliznational talent and completed two months after Mr. Carter's election warns that the Senate (and House) must prepare now for new presidential moves to weaken Congress' role and to strengthgn the power of the White House, the executive departments and agencies. Although Mr. Carter is nowhere named in the report, of course, and although the study most certainly was not aimed at him personally, it was known at the time of the report that he would be president. - And no caveats were added. Interestingly, a prominent member of the 11-man commission was Juanita M. Kreps, selected by Mr. Carter to be secretary of

The study advises the Senate in no uncertain terms not to relax because of Congress' success in its contest with President Nixon (Mr. Nixon is referred to but not named).

That presidential attempt, the Commission said, "threatened to upset the constitutional separation of powers."

There have been moves along these lines for some time now, sparked first by Vietnam and Watergate and spurred on by the investigations into intelligence operations. They have, in too many cases, relied on presidential agreements, some secret, which required no congressional ratification, instead of treaties which must be passed on by the Senate-. They have, by their actions, committed the United States to such an extent on some occasions that Congress was presented with a fait accompli - with no choice except but to go along or invite disaster for this country. It seems likely, judging by his relations with the legislature when governor of Georgia, that Mr. Carter will not react kindly to persistent congressional challenges to his authority and to the powers exercised by presidents over the past half century or so, including Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman, John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, of his own party, as well as Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

For by all accounts, Mr. Carter feels strongly about the authority and the role of the presidency. He is likely to regard any challenge as basely

Yearning Increasing For 'Good Old Days'

Anyone who may have dubbed nostalgia just a "Bicentennial by-product" and figured it wouldn't last beyond 1978 had helter thinks area. hetter think again. Better still, he should take a close look at new designs being shown at 1977 Winter Home Furnishing Markets in Chicago and other major market centers.

While the modern, contemperary and traditional styles all have a place in most merchan-dise categories, nothing quite equals nostalgia in either variety or numbers, according to Mary Ann Wills, decorating consultant to a Traverse City firm, manufacturer of home accessories."

"With or without any help from the Spirit of '78, a general accuraing for the so-called good old days has been increasingly apparent in recent years," she noted. "It's been especially visible in con the firm's many deep-dimensional wall plaques recreating times and places from America's past." From a continuing series of large collage-like usual devoted to such subjects as devoted to such subjects as pioneer living, old lire engines and railroading history. The company progressed into scenic mural-like studies of a 1920s farmyard, a small town of the 1880s, a coastal fishing village and a row of Victorian era town

Now, in keeping with the start of a new century of progress, the horizon has been expanded. This year's addition to the mural-plaque series is Place de Ville, a stereoscopic view of cobblestone streets lined with the shops, cases and dormer-windowed dwellings still found in so many old world towns and hamlets. There are 20 buildings in all.

some with striped awnings, shutters and quaint chinmeys, recreated in perfect scale and unusual depth perspective. Reproduced from a single original sculpture in wood, the scene measures 551/2 inches wide by 13%-inches high.
"Like the stereoscope pictures our great grandparents used to admire through their parlor viewers, Place de Ville almost gives one the feeling of actually being there." Wills commented. "But while their travel scenes were limited to black-ord-white photos. this black-and-white photos, this deep-dimensional plaque is finished in full color for even greater realism and decorative sight for the Fishing Village, a 53-inch wide mural-plaque introduced last year. New for 1977 are two companion pieces, The Boatbouse and Signal Point, carved to the same scale to serve as extensions — for a total width of over 93 inches — or placed elsewhere to suggest enastal "islands."

The Boathouse, complete with weathered pier, rack of oars and assorted vesels, is 191/2-inches by 71/2-inches high. Signal Point, named for a red-and-white marked buoy at one tip, depicts weathered buildings, an idle hoist- and several boats at dilapidated landing piers. It measures 18% by 8½-inches high.

Finished in appropriate colors, each plaque is a minia-ture New England scene in itself. Hung side by side, at different levels, or along with the big Fishing Village, they for great decorating flexibility.

Even before nostalgia gained a foothold in home furnishings and decor, it was rampant among automobile buffs. Collecting and restoring "clasas they are

"Authentic detailing, along with the remarkable perspective in which each car is shown, makes these three plaques worth seeing firsthand," Wills said. "The spoked wheels and even the tufted leather spats look so realistic, one almost expecis to hear a crank turning or road dust flying.

Inbeled ForeCast 1 and II, the new modular is made up of four identical plaques, each 18 inches square and containing one quadrant or quarter-circle of openwork patterns backed with bright mirror. The new with bright mirror. The new design is based entirely on straight littes forming spear-like shapes, and the total effect suggests an impressionistic sumburst.

"ForeCast III brings with it the same decorating adaptability as the first two modulars," Wills said. "The four pieces can be hung close together or spread out to form a larger square. Or they can be turned on the diagonal in a diamond shape that appears even larger in relation to walls and other furnishings." Just how much nostalgia and contemporary have in common is shown by a new wall planter that duplicates the look of oldwhite-painted wicker, right down to the texture of the natural fibers. Representing a new design dimension, even for a company like the Michigan firm, the planter begins with an elaborate scroll-shaped trellis 12 by 24% inches high.

Three molded flowerpots, styled in matching white wicker texture, are secured to the wall trellis by specially designed metal rings. The new wicker design will come complete with realistic artificial greenery. However, it can safely ac-considate real plants in fourinch pots, if desired.

While other styles may come and go with changing times, traditional seems like affected the tashion syndrome. There is, however, a perennial quest for something fresh and new in traditional design, according to Wills.

This is why the firm has come up with a large and lavish seven-light Traditional Sconce based on the ubiquitous acanthus leaf theme and finished in popular metal gold. Designed in a flowing curve, the openwork sconce measures 50inches wide and 19 inches high And it comes complete with candles, ready to assume a place of honor in the traditional dining or living room, Wills

Yearning Increasing For 'Good Old Days'

Anyone who may have dubbed nostalgia just a "Bicentennial by-product" and figured it wouldn't last beyond 1976 had better think again. Better still. he should take a close look at new designs being shown at 1977 Winter Home Furnishing Markets in Chicago and other major market centers.

While the modern, contemporary and traditional styles all have a place in most merchandise categories, nothing quite equals nostalgia in either variety or numbers, according to Mary Ann Wills, decorating consultant to a Traverse City firm, manufacturer of home ac-

'With or without any help from the Spirit of '76, a general rearning for the so-called good old days has been increasingly apparent in recent years," she noted. "It's been especially visible in consumer reactions to the firm's many deep-dimensional wall plaques recreating times and places from America's past.

From a continuing series of collage-like designs devoted to such subjects as pioneer living, old fire engines and railroading history, the company progressed into scenic mural-like studies of a 1920s farmyard, a small town of the 1880s, a coastal fishing village and a row of Victorian era town

Now, in keeping with the start of a new century of progress, the horizon has been expanded. This year's addition to the mural-plaque series is Place de Ville, a stereoscopic view of cobblestone streets lined with the shops, cafes and dormerwindowed dwellings still found in so many old world towns and

There are 20 buildings in all, some with striped awnings, shutters and quaint chimneys, recreated in perfect scale and unusual depth perspective. Reproduced from a single original sculpture in wood, the scene measures 551/2-inches wide by 133/4-inches high.

"Like the stereoscope pictures our great grandparents used to admire through their parlor viewers, Place de Ville almost gives one the feeling of actually being there," Wills commented. "But while their travel scenes were limited to black-and-white photos, this deep-dimensional plaque is finished in full color for even greater realism and decorative

Widening horizons are also in sight for the Fishing Village, a 53-inch wide mural-plaque introduced last year. New for 1977 are two companion pieces, The Boathouse and Signal Point. carved to the same scale to serve as extensions - for a total width of over 93 inches - or placed elsewhere to suggest coastal "islands."

The Boathouse, complete with weathered pier, rack of oars and assorted vesels, is 191/2-inches by 71/2-inches high. Signal Point, named for a red-and-white marked buoy at one tip, depicts weathered buildings, an idle hoist and several boats at dilapidated landing piers. It measures 183/4 by 81/2-inches

Finished in appropriate colors, each plaque is a miniature New England scene in itself. Hung side by side, at different levels, or along with the big Fishing Village, they make for great decorating flexibility.

Even before nostalgia gained a foothold in home furnishings and decor, it was rampant among automobile buffs. Collecting and restoring "classics," as they are usually called, is a popular and often very costly pastime.

'Many's the enthusiastic owner, in fact, who would no doubt display his current treasure in the living room or den, if only he could," suggest-

As the next best thing, the Traverse City firm is introducing an exciting trio of antique car recreations, colorful wall plaques that are detailed models of a 1914 Stutz Bearcat, a 1911 "Model T" Ford and a 1907 Rolls Royce. The sporty Stutz is 1834 by 7-inches high; the historic "Model T" is 18 by 111/4-inches high with its folding top, and the high-status Rolls is 19 by 7-inches high. "Authentic detailing, along with the remarkable perspective in which each car is shown, makes these three plaques worth seeing firsthand," Wills said. "The spoked wheels and even the tufted leather seats look so realistic, one almost expects to hear a crank turning or see road dust flying.'

Effectively bridging the gap from then to now is a contemporary nautical design, the Regatta. Made up of seven sleek racing sloops, their jibs and mainsails filled with a fresh breeze, the new 32% by 17-inch high plaque is shown in white matte finish that is especially effective against a dark or patterned wall.

White roughcast finish suits the mood of ForeCast III, the Traverse City firm's newest modular wall decoration. Like earlier designs ForeCast I and II, the new modular is made up of four identical plaques, each 18 inches square and containing one quadrant or quarter-circle of openwork patterns backed with bright mirror. The new design is based entirely on straight lines forming spearlike shapes, and the total effect suggests an impressionistic sunburst.

'ForeCast III brings with it the same decorating adaptability as the first two modulars," Wills said. "The four pieces can be hung close together or spread out to form a larger square. Or they can be turned on the diagonal in a diamond shape that appears even larger in relation to walls and other furnishings.

Just how much nostalgia and contemporary have in common is shown by a new wall planter that duplicates the look of oldwhite-painted wicker, right down to the texture of the natural fibers. Representing a new design dimension, even for a company like the Michigan firm, the planter begins with an elaborate scroll-shaped trellis 12 by 243/4-inches high.

Three molded flowerpots, styled in matching white wicker texture, are secured to the wall trellis by specially designed metal rings. The new wicker design will come complete with realistic artificial greenery. However, it can safely accomodate real plants in four-inch pots, if desired. While other styles may come and go with changing times. traditional seems like affected by the "fashion syndrome." There is, however, a perennial quest for something fresh and new in traditional design, according to Wills.

This is why the firm has come up with a large and lavish seven-light Traditional Sconce based on the ubiquitous acanthus leaf theme and finished in popular metal gold. Designed in a flowing curve, the openwork sconce measures 50inches wide and 19-inches high. And it comes complete with candles, ready to assume a place of honor in the traditional dining or living room, Wills Mirrors often are referred to as "wall brighteners," a term that is just right to describe a new assortment of framed accent mirrors. The assortment includes three sizes: 4% by 6inches, 4% by 101/8-inches and 4% and 201/4-inches, all including frames.

Perfect to mix with pictures and plaques in a contemporary setting, the mirror frames are finished in combinations of white and sunny yellow or white with spring green. A 12-piece assortment includes two of each size and color.

King Nebuchadnezzar efected a huge golden statue on the plain of Dura, and he ordered all of his principal officers to come and worship the golden icon. "And whose falleth not down and worshippeth, shall hour be cast into the midst of a burning tien

However, the king soon heard reports that Shadrach, Meshach ednego had refused to worship any god except the enraged Nebuchadnezzar brought the three men before him. ## THE BIBLE No. 275. The Fiery Furnace

King Nebuchadnezzar erected a huge golden statue on the plain of Dura, and he ordered all of his principal officers to come and worship the golden icon. "And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace."

However, the king soon heard reports that Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego had refused to worship any god except their own. The enraged Nebuchadnezzar brought the three men before him. When they refused to worship the golden image, the king ordered them thrown into a fiery furnace heated seven times hotter than normal so hot, in fact, that the heat killed the soldiers who threw them into

The king was soon astonished when he neared the furnace and . Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, . . . ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came forth of the midst of the fire." (Daniel 3:25-26)

YEARS AWAY

LONDON (AP) - Anglican and Roman Catholic representatives have agreed that in any future union between the two churches, some type of primacy should be held by the Pope of

However, the participants agreed that Anglicans, including Episcopalians in the United States, have not been able to accept some Roman Catholic concepts of the extent of papal authority, such as infallibility in defining faith and morals. Official action on the document was considered years away.

BACKWARD STEP

NEW YORK (AP) - Leaders of the U.S. Catholic Conference and of the national Council of Churches say the execution of Gary Gilmore represents a backward step into brutality and despair.

It "contributes to the brutalization of our whole society," say officials of the interdenominational cooperative body of 30 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations. A Catholic official, Dr. Francis J. Butler, said "reliance on the death penalty is an admission of failure rooted in a philosophy of hopelessness.

NEW YORK (AP) - A Polish Methodist leader, the Rev. Adam Kuczma, citing signs of improved attitudes in the United States toward churchmen in Communist-ruled Eastern Europe, says that on a previous U.S. visit he noted headlines such as "Red Clergy Visit," but had observed no such stereotyping on his present trip.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Ulcers Died With His Wife

Dear Ann: Many writers (including you) have devoted a lot of space to the Battered Wife and the Sadistic Husband who abuses her. You seem to believe he is a psychopath who should be counseled and/or jailed in short order.

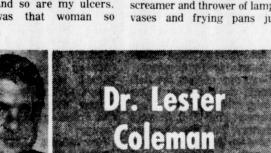

I remember my uncle, whose wife badgered him, complained and criticized endlessly. Why he put up with it I could never understand. True, they had children and they were poor, but

Then came my turn. I married the prettiest, most virtuous girl in town. Within two years she became the same kind of badgering, complaining, critical wife my aunt had been. But we had children and were poor and she was still beautiful and insisted she loved only me.

Now, after 40 years, she is gone. And so are my ulcers. Why was that woman so miserable to live with? I have speculated that perhaps she thought the honeymoon would last forever. When it didn't and I became busy with other things (such as keeping the wolf from having pups on our doorstep), she started in on me. I believe now she did it to get my attention. I wonder if I should have slapped that mean mouth of hers when she began to get ugly. I wish I had done it.

Supreme Court Decision Everyone is born to die.

The fact that over a million babies died while yet within their mother's womb is unspeakably tragic.

But speak we must.

"What happens to the mind of a person and the moral fabric of a nation that accepts the aborting of the life of a baby ut a pang of conscience? What kind of a person, and what kind of a society will we have in 20 years hence if life can be taken so casually?" - The Rev. Jesse Jackson

In 1857 the Court decided Amendment changed that ruling and recognized blacks as full human beings, persons still discrimination, BUT there is now legal recourse. And the amount of discrimination has been drasticly cut.

In 1973 the Court ruled that property, not people, and can be killed at will. We need a Constitutional Amend-ment to change that decision. There will still be abortions, BUT there will also be legal recourse. And the number of abortions will be drasticly cut.

Richard Fenske and Robert Pavey of the Dane County sheriff's office will be moving back into autos in the spring, but for now they're enjoying their snowy patrol - despite the cold temperatures and bitter winds that surround them on the job. "It's not easy when you're out there writing a citation in the middle of a blizzard," Pavey said. "When you're on the road you've always got your car and some place to do your paper-

Fenske, 40, and Pavey, 36, cruise the county's hundreds of miles of lake and trail country much as other deputies patrol

Their snowmobiles are equipped with flashing red lights, and we're getting sirens pretty soon," Fenske said.

The two officers said they're sometimes so bundled up in bulky clothing, masks and helmets that their appearance prompts mirth among fellow officers. And they worry that all their thermal wear could give them trouble retrieving weapons from underneath. Fenske said he and his partner work as "a law enforcement patrol and a safety patrol.

They have ticketed snowmobilers for such violations as not being certified, having an unregistered machine, reckless driving and passing too close to pedestrians.

'We don't hesitate to write citations, but we like to treat the public as they deserve to be treated, which is generally good,"

They've also helped a pregnant woman to the hospital, brought medicine and groceries to snowbound people and headed off a wild snowmobile headed for open water.

Snowmobiles can reach 100 miles per hour, and patrol work makes for hair-raising chases. "It's very scary," Fenske said, "Our biggest frustration is chasing people without lights at night. Each time we've caught 'em, though.

STRONG OPPOSITION BY CATHOLIC CHURCH

Abortion Law On Way In Italy

By MICHAEL J. DUFFY Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) - Italy's lower house of parliament has passed one of Western Europe's most liberal abortion laws to replace a Mussolini-era ban on abortions as a crime against the purity of the Italian race.

The measure, strongly opposed by the Roman Catholic church and the ruling Christian Democratic party, would give omen the final say on abortions within the first three months of pregnancy. A coalition of parties ranging from Communists to conservative Liberals passed the law 310-296 in Italy's House of Deputies on Friday. It now goes to the Senate, where the coalition is weaker but probably strong enough to pass the bill.

Flamino Piccoli, head of the Christian Democrats in the lower house, called the law a "profound wound to the spirit of our people."

The new law would permit abortion to avoid "serious danger for the physical or mental health of the woman in relation to her state of health, to her economic, social or family condition or to the circumstances in which she conceived, or in anticipation of abnormalities or malformations in the baby to be born.'

After the first 90 days of pregnancy, doctors would have to certify abortions and could do so only if they saw danger to the

Repair The Boom

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) - A fleet of four vessels were trying Friday to repair a broken ice boom so Lake Superior's winter shipping season can come to an end. The Coast Guard icebreakers Mackinaw and Naugatuck, along with two Corps of Engineers boats, the derrick Harvey and the tug Frederick, were on hand to aid in the repair work. Four freighters are stuck near Sault Ste. Marie waiting for the boom to be repaired. "At this time we do not have an estimate as to when repairs will be completed so the four ships can pass through and close the winter season," a Corps of Engineers spokesman said late Friday. He said warming temperatures in the St. Marys River caused ice to break away from the shoreline and move toward the long log-and-cable booms used to keep the narrow river channel clear. A portion of the boom on the mainland side broke loose and one cable sank to the river

Dr. Donald Bradley said an autopsy was planned and "we'll have to wait and see then." Bower's case was confirmed by laboratory tests Tuesday. He was hospitalized Dec. 28 showing signs of paralysis in his arms and legs. But Bradley had reported Tuesday that Bower no longer was paralyzed and seemed to be recovering. Bower, who had a swine flu shot in December, was the Battle Creek area's second confirmed case of the syndrome. A 39-yearold Bellevue woman was hospitalized in Battle Creek on Dec. 20 but she was discharged from Community Hospital on Monday.

But persons who own property abutting the road and whose access depends on the road may seek compensation for the loss of access, he said. The property owner is not required to keep the road open.

impressive," said Bee coach Doug Hendricks. "Linke and Mutz have been playing good ball but Wolf had a bad weekend last weekend except for the second half against Saugatuck. But Wolf had an excellent game tonight... all three did. And Mutz was throwing in some 25-foot bombers." Berrien Springs kept hounding the hosts and came within 70-66 with about three minutes to go in the game. But then Mutz hit Wolf for a lay-up and Tom Meredith hit two free throws to give the Bees command again.

Mutz, who was seven of 10 from the lines, hit eight points in the last quarter while Meredith was four-of-four in foul shots in the final period.

Berrien Springs, which falls to 4-4 in the Red Arrow and 5-8 overall, got 24 points from Terry Hosbein, 18 from Mike Shembarger and 14 from Jack Lewis. The Shamrocks hit an ex-

Bridgman held a 27-18 rebound margin with Mutz getting 10 caroms. The Bees made 21 turnovers, the Shamrocks 17.

Bridgman, which tops the league at 8-0, travels to Hartford tonight while Berrien Springs travels to Lake Michigan Catholic.

Billy Howard rifled in 24 as the Bee junior varsity won 65-60.

Galien Posts Red Arrow Win Over Bisons

Tom Miller of New Buffalo would certainly like to have two quarters of Friday night's game back. The Bisons had horrible first and third quarters as they dropped a Red Arrow Conference game to Galien here 61-56.

'When we're bad, we're horrendous," he sighed. "But when we play good, we're great.'

In the initial stanza, Galien outscored New Buffalo 20-6 as the Bisons hit just three of 17 field goal tries. The third quarter was more of the same as New Buffalo made just four of 20 floor shots but were only outscored 12-8.

'In the first quarter we missed seven shots in the lane and in the third we missed 12 in the lane," Miller commented. Matt Koziel had his best night

Jim Wold led the Bisons, now 2-6 in the conference and 2-9 overall, with 15 points. John Miller -added 13 and Mark D'Amato 12.

Galien, now 4-4 in the Red Arrow and 4-8 on the season, hit 26 of 51 floor shots (51 per cent) while New Buffalo could manage just 27 of 77 tries (35.1).

Orange Prices Going Up

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) -The price of orange juice, as well as that of fresh fruit, will be forced up by this week's sub-freezing weather in Florida, industry officials say.

Oranges that are frozen too badly to be shipped fresh can still be used for juice, but this week's four days of sub-freezing weather will even cut into the juice supply, officials said Friday.

The Florida Citrus Commission declared a 10-day embargo, starting Monday, on the shipment and sale of citrus fruit to prevent spoiled fruit from being sent to market and to give the industry time to assess the

Dr. Lester Myers of the Florida Citrus Department went before the commission Friday to estimate how much juice prices would go up.

He said that if the freeze has destroyed 24 per cent of the orange crop, a six-ounce can of frozen orange juice concentrate could go to an average of 24.9 cents. It would jump to 27.8 cents in a 32 per cent crop loss and 31 cents with a 40 per cent loss, he estimated.

The freeze has affected, but not necessarily destroyed, about 40 per cent of the crop, most sources say.

Orange juice has been selling at 17 and 18 cents a can recently, but the department says that's because of sales promotions and that 22 cents is a "more realistic" base price.

Most sources said it could be the middle of next week or later before accurate damage and price-adjustment assessments could be made.

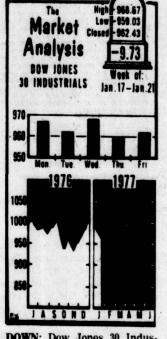

Meanwhile, inspectors from the state's Fruit & Vegetable Inspection Service will test fruit from all areas of more than 850,000 acres of groves in the

Strikers Okay New Pact

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) - Striking Oakland County employes have approved a new contract and will return to work Monday, says County Executive Dan Murphy. The vote Friday on the twoyear pact was 258-67, Murphy said. The workers belong to Local 1998 of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employes. The 700-member local ecompasses a mixed bag of county employes, ranging from animal control officers to mental health workers and custodians. The union struck the county Jan. 4, five days after negotiations broke off on a new pact. Their old contract expired Dec. 31. About 42 per cent of the strikers had crossed picket lines and returned to work in the meantime, county officials said. On Wednesday, Murphy sent a letter to those still on strike, informing them they would be fired if they did not return by Monday. The new pact includes an 11.12 per cent wage increase over its two-year term, Murphy said.

Bailey Wants It All

MENOMINEE, Mich. (AP) - Famed trial lawyer F. Lee Bailey says he will buy up all outstanding stock of the Enstrom Helicopter Co. and make the company a closed corporation. Bailey owns all but six per cent of the firm. The remaining six per cent, however, is owned by about 1,700 people, says Bailey. The lawyer says individual stockholders are proving hard to find. Bailey said he wanted to buy up the remainder of the Enstrom stock so the firm would no longer have to file quarterly reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission, hold annual stockholders meetings nor publish an annual report. Bailey said that as major stockholder, he could offer the remaining other stockholders an offer to merge. If they do not feel he is offering a fair price, Bailey said, the shareholders can ask to have an independent appraiser set a price. The move, if successful, would save the firm $20,000 a year, a spokesman said.

DETROIT (AP) - Honda predicts its 1977 U.S. sales could reach 200,000 - which could put the Japanese carmaker ahead of third-place importer Volkswagen for the first time if VW fails to pull out of its recent sales slump.

U.S. Sales

"We are not in any race with them," said Cliff Schmillen, national field sales manager for Honda. But, he admitted, "It's going to be an interesting

The West German automaker's U.S. sales have fallen from a 1971 high of 573,000 to 201,000 last year. Two other Japanese automakers, Toyota and Datsun, knocked VW out of first place in foreign sales here within the past two years. They now hold down first and second spot, respectively.

But VW, gearing up to build its Rabbit cars at a Pennsylvania plant next year, says its slump has bottomed out, and predicts it could sell 233,000 cars in 1977.

Honda sold 150,000 cars last year, compared with 102,000 in 1975 and 43,000 the year before.

"There is no way we could get more than 200,000 cars from Japan, much less 240,000, Schmillen said. "So, if VW makes its goal, it will stay ahead of us.

Speaking at a Detroit press conference Thursday, Schmillen said Honda's 1977_ sales strategy will stress service, since the firm has introduced no new models.

Schmillen said his firm's official 1977 U.S. sales forecast is 180,000 vehicles, but the way sales are going, he may ask the factory for another 20,000.

Bailey Denies He's A Fugitive

Associated Press Writer CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — State Rep.-elect William Ha-Bailey plended innocent to being a fugitive from justice Friday and posted bail pending a hear-ing on a Michigan arrest wagrani. Bailey, a Providênce Democrat elected to the General Assembly in November, surrendered voluntarily Friday morning to Rhode Island State Police after the warrant, issued earlier this week, was received lie was fingerprinted and photographed by authorities and later appeared in Cranston District Court where he entered the innecent plea and was released on a $3,000 double surety bond.

Bailey's attorney, Andrew A. Bucci, said his client would ap-pear again in Cranston District Court on Feb. 18 to fight the fugitive warrant.

Borci said he would argue that Bailey still is on bail in Michigan, despite an order from a Port Huron, Mich. court this week revoking the $2,000 bond under which he was released following a 1973 larceny conviction.

The first-term state representative elect was con-victed of stealing 31 record alto two-to-four years in prison. However, he was released bail pending an appeal, which Railey said his Michiney filed and the Port Huron prosecutor never answered.

The case was continued until Feb. 15 and then if a governor's warrant (for extradition) is not issued, the case can be enlarged for another 60 days," Bucci said Friday.

"If the governor's warrant corner down then Phill would po back voluntarily and we would make our peace with the judge back there (in Michigan)."

SURRENDERS: William H. Bailey, state representative elect, enters Rhode Island State Police headquarters in Scituate, R.I., Friday to surrender himself on a warrant from Michigan where he faces a 2- to 4-year prison term for larceny. (AP Wirephoto).

Bailey Denies He's A Fugitive

Associated Press Writer CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) State Rep.-elect William H. Bailey pleaded innocent to being a fugitive from justice Friday and posted bail pending a hearing on a Michigan arrest

Providence Bailey, Democrat elected to the General Assembly in November. surrendered voluntarily Friday morning to Rhode Island State Police after the warrant, issued earlier this week, was received

He was fingerprinted and photographed by authorities and later appeared in Cranston District Court where he entered the innocent plea and was released on a $3,000 double

Bailey's attorney, Andrew A. Bucci, said his client would appear again in Cranston District Court on Feb. 18 to fight the fugitive warrant

Bucci said he would argue that Bailey still is on bail in Michigan, despite an order from a Port Huron, Mich. court this week revoking the $2,000 bond under which he was released following a 1973 larceny convic-

The first-term state representative-elect was convicted of stealing 31 record albums from an Algonac, Mich. department store and sentenced to two-to-four years in prison.

However, he was released on bail pending an appeal, which Bailey said his Michigan attorney filed and the Port Huron prosecutor never answered. "The case was continued until Feb. 15 and then if a governor's warrant (for extradition) is not issued, the case can be enlarged for another 60 days," Bucci said Friday

"If the governor's warrant comes down, then Bill would go back voluntarily and we would make our peace with the judge back there (in Michigan).

"But their interest died fast," he added. "After they studied it, they found it would be cheaper to build a new stadium.

CON Dr. George Gertwer. Dean, Annenberg School of Communications. University of Pennsylvania

Yes. The evidence is convincing that cheap and stereotyped violence on American television is the highest in the world and has not changed much, especially late-evening and children's programming. It is prejudicial to women, older people and minority-group characters as they tend to be portrayed as victims. The consequence of heavy exposure to this diet is acceptance of violence as a ready solution to problems. If we don't want our children to grow up mean and terrorized by vivid images of meanness around them, we need to change the amount and pattern of violence on television.

STALLONE FIGHTS HIS WAY TO THE TOP

It sounds comy and sentimental: a down-and-out loser destined to fail makes it to the Big Time. But that's the story of the hit movie Rocky—and of its star and writer.

By Carol Botwin

"I asked myself a long time ago, with it it like to really make it? Do you go, Yeah! I made it! and kiss every mirror you pass, or do you become baffled and sit book and watch yourself? Well, I'm sitting back and trying to get some perspective on what's going on."

Sylvester Stallone, who has just made it big as star and writer of the new hit movie Rocky, is talking in the living room of his manager's apartment. Even now it's hard to believe how it all happened. "I was getting nervous," he recalls. 'I was pushing thirty. It was now or never. I thought desperately, I need a vehicle." In the unbelievably short time of three-and-a-half days he wrote Rocky, the story of a down andout fighter who gets one final chance to make it through a fluky opportunity to fight the world champion. The script ended up in the offices of producers Robert Chartoff and Irwin Winkler. They liked it. So did United Artists. But nobody wanted the unknown Sylvester Stallone to play the part of Rocky. They searched, instead, for "bankable" big names like Burt Reynolds and James Caan. Sulvester stubbornly held on. Atlast he convinced everybody, and the part was his.

"Then I panicked," he remembers. "Okay, Siy, I said to myself. You've got it, but what if you can't do it? On the day the movie started I was sitting in a trailer at 4:00 A.M. in Philadelphia. I couldn't move. The technicians kept calling me from outside. Finally, I psyched myself. I got up, passed a mirror, and looked at myself—in all the makeup and thought, all right, Rocky, you can do it. I kicked open the door and never felt any doubt after that."

He believes Rocky is a success because it is an old-fashioned story about a hero who triumpts. "The public is sick of weirdos," he says passionately. "A man who tworks hard all week and wants to go to the movies with his family is subjected to brutality, murder, a bombardment of foul language. You have every conceivable sicko on screen. The public wants something, someone to believe in. And that's what I'm going to give them in the future-optimistic films."

But at this time in his life he is trying to adjust to the overwhelming critical acclaim that began even before the film opened—the rush of interviews, the scripts with starring parts suddenly being sent to him, the idea of having lots of money for the first time. At the moment, however, Sylvester appears remarkably relaxed. His head is against the back of his chair. His legs are stretched out, crossed at the ankles. A glass of wine stands within easy reach of his large, chunky hends.

In repose, the face of Sylvester Stations is an unlikely one for a star too much jow, hangdog eyes, hips that curl downward. The most remarkable thing about his appearance is his shoes, which come to victors attletto-pointed aps. They are don't mass with smann. It lackly you shoes. The face, and she shoes are street guy sough, but Sylvester, as he talks, is not.

He ignores the phone that constantly rings, as well as the hot lights put up by the photographer, who stilently stalks him, and explains that it is Sylvester the author I am looking at, not Sylvester the actor.

"Me, the writer, I am unaggressive, curious, very relaxed. If you were interviewing me the actor, however, I would be doing handsprings, cartwheels, showing you my tap dancing—anything to catch your attention. It's a habit I picked-up auditioning for producers. They always ask, Tell me a little about yourself," and then give you one minute. So you tell them you've been lost in a blizzard in the Alps; married 37 women—anything that will get you through that wall of indifference."

Sylvester admits that he was rarely successful in getting through to producers in the past, and success did not come easily. In fact, that it came at all is extraordinary.

Born 30, years ago in New York's Hell's Kitchen to an Italian unning and father and an excellength mother. Sylvester was trouble from the start. By the age of two he was diagnosed as hyperkinetic. "I thought nothing of taking a crayon and going over someone's entire living room wall with it or completely dismantling a piano. I was lost in famastes, fantasies, fantasies."

When he was five, the Stallone family moved first to Maryland, then to Philadelphia, where Sythwater spent the rest of his childhood, and adolescence being a cutup in class, a builty after class; getting thrown out of one school after another and visiting a series of psychiatrists. "I was ostractzed. They called me crazy, and I began to believe it. I felt includy understood me. My father dich't. My hyperness drove him crazy. The punished me severely for things that were really out of my control.

But my mother," he says with admiration and warmth, "she was wonderful. She supported me no matter what I did. She is one of the world's great eccentrics herself and was always trying out new things. She allowed me to feel I could fail and still go on."

At 19 Sylvester decided he had to do something with himself. "I knew I wasn't crazy, but I also knew something was wrong. I decided maybe it was what I was putting into my body. I started taking vitamins, and it helped." To this day, Sylvester swigs down a mind-boggling array of vitamin supplements.

Straightening out his life also included going to college. He enrolled at the University of Miemi but found that still another disastrous experience. He dropped out and came to New York to try his luck as an actor, but the closest he got to an active role in the theater was a job as an usher at a movie house. He did come away from that job, though, with Sasha, a girl friend who believed in him, an actress who was working as an usherette. She is now his wife.

Out of desperation Sylvester started to write. The words came easily, something he attributes—quite seriously—to having been a writer in a previous existence. "It's going to sound crazy in print," he admits, "but I do believe I have had other lives. I think I was guillotined during the French Revolution. When I see a movie about a person being guillotined, I have the strangest feeling I know what it was like."

"Sly," as he is called by friends, is also a passionate believer in astrology. My hid is an astro-baby. My wife and I wanted our child bornunder a specific sign. We went to the doctor and told him it had to be born within the hourthe constellations were about to change. He said, 'Impossible, She won't be ready for at least 12 hours,' But he didn't know my wife,' The baby-was born in 32 minutes flat, Fantastic!"

It was through astrology, too, that his mother predicted his success as a writer. Her prediction was, in part, what kept him behind the typewriter while his wife worked to keep them eating.

And what does he predict for himself? 'I'd like to be able to help other writers and actors get started. I want to take long shorts and never forget where I came from That's why I keep pictures of myself from three or four years ago next to my bathroom mirror. I look at them, every day and remind myself what a mirracle this all has been."

I started taking vitamins, and it helped." To this day, Sylvester swigs down a mind-boggling array of vitamin supplements.

Straightening out his life also included going to college. He enrolled at the University of Miami but found that still another disastrous experience. He dropped out and came to New York to try his luck as an actor, but the closest he got to an active role in the theater was a job as an usher at a movie house. He did come away from that job, though, with Sasha, a girl friend who believed in him, an actress who was working as an usherette. She is now his wife.

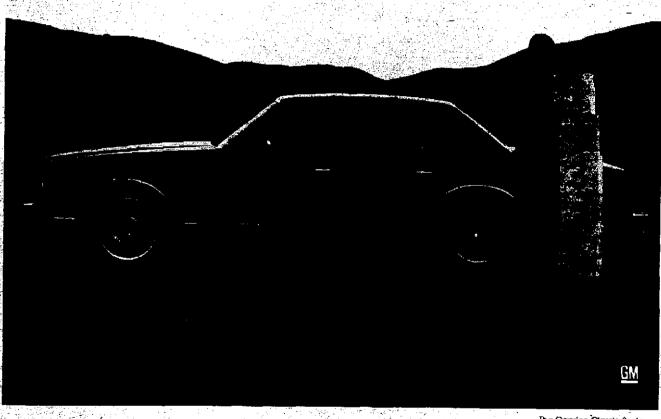

Out of desperation Sylvester started to write. The words came easily, something he attributes—quite seriously to having been a writer in a previous existence. "It's going to sound crazy in print," he admits, "but I do believe I have had other lives. I think I was guillotined during the French Revolution. When I see a movie about a person being guillotined, I have the strangest feeling I know what it was like."

"Sly," as he is called by friends, is also a passionate believer in astrology. "My kid is an astro-baby. My wife and I wanted our child born under a specific sign. We went to the doctor and told him it had to be born within the hour—the constellations were about to change. He said, 'Impossible. She won't be ready for at least 12 hours.' But he didn't know my wife. The baby was born in 32 minutes flat. Fantastic!"

It was through astrology, too, that his mother predicted his success as a writer. Her prediction was, in part, what kept him behind the typewriter while his wife worked to keep them eating.

And what does he predict for himself? "I'd like to be able to help other writers and actors get started. I want to take long shots and never forget where I came from. That's why I keep pictures of myself from three or four years ago next to my bathroom mirror. I look at them every day and remind myself what a miracle this all has been."

EXERCISE FOR FUN

Certain physical characteristics reveal not only which sports you'll do well in and like the best but also a good deal about how you approach life.

By George Sheehan, M.D.

The main problem with exercising is how to make it fun. So before you begin any program—and as little as thirty minutes four times a week can convert you from a lounge lizard to an energetic athlete—first ask yourself what you'll enjoy. Begin by analyzing your body type. Function follows structure, and each of us is built to do some things better than others. Our physiques range from eggshape to something resembling a flagpole, and there are sports and games to fit every build. Next, consider your temperament. We react differently to stress—by withdrawal, by confrontation or by seeking to be with others.

Assessing one's suitability for a particular physical activity through analysis of body type and temperament is called constitutional psychology. It is a controversial concept, and there are certainly exceptions to the guidelines set forth below. Nevertheless, from a practical standpoint the concept can make you think about what type of person you are and what exercise program you'll be happy with.

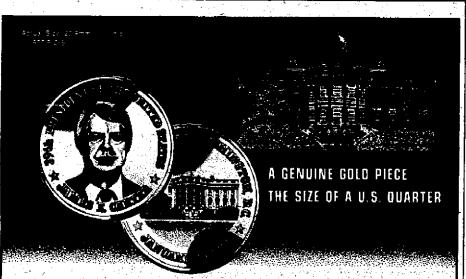

The best differentiation of body types is based on the three layers of the human embryo: endoderm, mesoderm and ectoderm. Endomorphs (morph means shape) have large stomachs and intestines. They like to eat, drink and socialize and tend to be short on strength and endurance. Because of their round build. endomorphs are best suited for activities that don't require working against gravity—cycling, skiing, walking, running, termis, golf and yoga, for example. Endomorphs, as a rule. don't like solitary pursuits. They need company. Finally, although endomorphs usually are not natural athletes, they have one physical advantage—they float well and can swim almost indefinitely.

Mesomorphs are strong and powerful people with heavy miscles and well-developed hearts and circulatory systems. Often they are natural athletes, and they prefer competitive sports, particularly those which require they go one-on-one with an opponent. As courageous individuals who love excitement and action, they want to hit something or somebody. Hence, they are happy with contact sports, baskethall, marital arts, wrestling and boxing, and with hitting games such as squash and handball. They can be induced to jog, cycle or ski if competition is added or if they can add the challenge of personal "goals."

Ectomorphs tend to be thin and fragile with a low threshold for pain. They distlike going head-to-head and avoid physical contact. They shun schedules and regular activities (like tennis doubles every Wednesday night). The ectomorph is the ideal lonely jogger, long-distance runner, skler and walker.

Which group do you belong to? Which physical activity is right for you? Remember, the important thing is to have fun, and filmess will take care of itself.

YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH AND GROOMING GUIDE

Here's medical news on dental care, helping dry skin and more.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Le Hot Facial

For dry, winter skin try this before bedtime: warm up a spoonful of petroleum jelly by resting a teaspoon over a bowl of very hot water or letting underside of spoon touch the water. Meanwhile, remove makeup. Next, massage the warm jelly into the face and throat. Place face in a hot, moist towel for a few minutes. Then, tissue off the excess jelly. Enough lubricant will remain to protect the skin from moisture loss and to give it a soft, smooth feeling.

Tooth Flash!

Here's an update from the American Dental Association on how you and your children should brush for the removal of plaque, a primary cause of tooth decay and gum disease.

Place toothbrush on your teeth with the bristle tips against the gum line. Move back and forth with very short strokes, brushing the gums as well as outer surface of upper and lower teeth. Use the same method on inside surface of your teeth.

To clean the four upper and lower front teeth, however, tilt the brush vertically, using several gentle up-an-down strokes with the "toe" (front part) of brush, with bristles against the teeth and gum tissue.

Rx Drug Safety

Here are some good pointers from the F.D.A. on the use and storing of drugs: never take drugs in combination or along with alcohol without your doctor's approval . . . Use pill boxes only for temporary storage, as pills can lose or gain strength . . . Never carry nitroglycerin in a pill box; keep in original container, designed to maintain pills' potency . . . Rx A drug is prescribed for you alone, never meant to be shared . . . It's a good idea to discard all leftover prescription drugs. For a free copy of A Primer on Medicines, write Consumer Information, Dept. 53, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Your Body— The Magnificent Machine

Do you know that our bodies are more efficient than computers? . . . The human heart pumps blood through 70,000 miles of blood vessels and back in less than a minute . . . The nose cleans, humidifies and warms about 500 cubic feet of air for the lungs daily . . . Many bones, such as thigh bones, are tubular, making them stronger than a solid rod of steel. Some more fascinating facts? Your palms and soles contain the richest supply of sweat glands but very few oil glands—which is why they get wrinkled when you stay in water too long. And those "goose bumps" you get on a cold day are a carry-over from our "furry" days, when skin muscles tightened so that hair would stand on end for better insulation and protection.

Observations

Never on Sunday? Our offer of $25 U.S. Savings Bonds for verified examples of silly government rules is producing no end of funny—and not so funny—letters. And once in a while there's evidence that government is overcoming its silliness. A letter from James L. Morgan of Winchester, Virginia, provides an example. He reported that he could buy beer and soft drinks on Sundays in his town, but he couldn't buy ice there. If he wanted ice for his drinks, he had to purchase it outside city limits. Well, in the November election, Winchester repealed its silly rule. Quite a victory for the voters.

It's taxing. If you work in New York City but live elsewhere, one tax form you must file is called a "certificate of nonresidence." And just to avoid any confusion, the form includes the following:

"Nonresident individual.—A nonresident individual means an individual who is not a resident."

A word about supply. In a recent nationwide survey, 51 percent of those polled favored an end to price controls on U.S. oil and natural gas. Only 27 percent backed continued regulation. Which leads us to believe that most Americans know the importance of assured supply. And we would add: they also know the economy can tolerate reasonably higher prices better than a shortage of basic energy supplies.

A quote we like. "The best things and best people rise out of their separateness, I'm against a homogenized society because I want the cream to rise." Robert Frost.

Endeavour. That was the name of the ship on which Captain James Cook set out in 1768 to go "as far as it was possible for man to go." His travels took him to King George's Island (now Tahiti) where he bartered with the natives and observed a strange new art form: tattoos. His adventures are the third episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" documentary series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings for time and station.

Why Winning A Marriage Fight Means You Lose partition of the sale of the control of the control

When Bill and Ellen's car stalls in the middle of a busy highway, Ellen says, "See, I keep telling you the car needs a check-up." And in Ralph's and Ruth's kitchen, Ruth is rushing to complete dinner before guests arrive. The salad bowl slips from her hand, smashes on the floor. Ralph bursts out, "I told you, you didn't allow enough time to get ready." Both Ellen and Ralph feel they've "won." Other couples will store up grudges and "win" their fights by suddenly hauling out their lists and using them as weapons.

When you push your mate to a You-Lose, I-Win position, your marriage loses. Consequently, neither husband nor wife really "wins" says marriage counselor Marcia Lasswell who, with Norman M. Lobsenz, has written No-Fault Marriage, The New Technique of Self-Counselling and What It Can Help You Do (Doubleday, 1976). To really win a marital fight, you both must abandon the idea of personal victory and concentrate on what exactly you're fighting about and how it can be resolved. A phrase like "Prove it!" in the midst of an argument inflames controversy rather than aims at a solution. Be especially careful of turning a small disagreement into a crisis say Lobsenz and Lasswell. For example, if you're arguing about where to go on a Saturday evening, stick to the point. Don't drag in serious differences about money by accusing your spouse of being unwilling to spend a few extra dollars for the night's entertainment. The authors conclude, "Ultimately the basic reason that 'winning' does not work is that it reduces marriage to a power struggle.

... A couple can opt for power and seek to 'win.' Or they can opt for love and seek to reach accord."

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Are You Neurotic? Here's a quick way to find the answer.

TRUE OR FALSE?

- 1. Most people have neurotic tendencies.
- 2. Neurotics are relatively happy.
- 3. The person who always feels sorry for himself, feels abused by others and claims no one appreciates or understands him has an excellent chance of developing a full-blown neurosis.
- 4. Never ask a neurotic person how he feels—he's liable to tell you.
- It's easy for a person to determine the extent to which he is neurotic or well adjusted.
- 6. The United States is the least neurotic nation.

ANSWERS

- 1. True. As one leading psychiatrist has observed: it is the rare person who does not have some tendencies which result in mental and emotional conflicts; however, only in some people do they develop into neurosis. Truly neurotic people are described as being constantly in conflict with their environment, fighting their emotional battles on two fronts: inside, as visible in their physical symptoms and personality difficulties; and outside, in their quarrels and obstinacy.
- 2. False. In his pen portrait of the typical neurotic, Professor H. J. Eysenck, Director of the Psychological Laboratories at The University of London, describes him with such adjectives as

"moody," "touchy" and "restless."

3. True. Studies show that many peo-

- 3. True. Studies show that many people develop elaborate neuroses based on feelings of abuse and claims derived from these feelings. ("I don't know why I should have to take all that abuse from anybody.") Such people make a career of misconstruing remarks and imagining slights and insults.
- 4. True. In a study conducted by British and American specialists, a questionnaire concerning the number of neurotic symptoms experienced during one week was answered by 100 known neurotics and 100 normals. Findings: complaints were reported more frequently in neurotics than normals.
- 5. True. Psychologist Gardner Murphy suggests: "A well-adjusted personality is one which utilizes effectively and without conflict all that it possesses." In other words, the person with a well-adjusted personality doesn't waste energies on self-doubts and inner conflicts but applies whatever assets he does have to his everyday life. The extent to which he is capable of doing this will provide him with an accurate index of his adjustment.
- 6. False. A study of national differences in neurosis, sponsored by Britain's Social Science Research Council, showed the nation with the highest incidence of neurosis to be Austria; the least neurotic, Ireland, with the U.S. roughly in middle place.

It's taxing. If you work in New York City but live elsewhere, one tax form you must file is called a "certificate of nonresidence." And just to avoid any confusion, the form includes the following:

> "Nonresident individual.—A nonresident individual means an individual who is not a resident."

A word about supply. In a recent nationwide survey, 51 percent of those polled favored an end to price controls on U.S. oil and natural gas. Only 27 percent backed continued regulation. Which leads us to believe that most Americans know the importance of assured supply. And we would add; they also know the economy can tolerate reasonably higher prices better than a shortage of basic energy supplies.

A quote we like. "The best things and best people rise out of their separateness, I'm against a homogenized society because I want the cream to rise." Robert Frost.

Endeavour. That was the name of the ship on which Captain James Cook set out in 1768 to go "as far as it was possible for man to go." His ravels took thirn to King George's Island (now Tahiti) where he bartered with the natives and observed a strange new an form: tattoos. His adventures are the third episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" documentary series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings for time and station.

Why Winning A Marriage Fight Means You Lose

When Bill and Ellen's car stalls in the middle of a busy highway, Ellen says, "See, I keep telling you the car needs a check-up." And in Ralph's and Ruth's kitchen, Ruth is rushing to complete dinner before guests arrive. The salad bowl slips from her hand, smashes on the floor. Ralph bursts out, "I told you, you didn't allow enough time to get ready." Both Ellen and Ralph feel they've "won." Other couples will store up grudges and "win" their fights by suddenly hauling out their lists and using them as weapons.

When you push your mate to a You-Lose, I-Win position, your marriage loses. Consequently, neither husband nor wife really "wins" says marriage counselor Marcia Lasswell who, with Norman M. Lobsenz, has written No-Fault Marriage, The New Technique of Self-Counselling and What It Can Help You Do (Doubleday, 1976). To really win a marital flight, you both must abandon the idea of personal victory and concentrate on what exactly you're fighting about and how it can be resolved. A phrase like. "Prove it!" in the midst of an argument seek to 'win.' Or they can opt for love and seek to reach accord."

Are You Neurotic? Here's a quick way to find the answer.

TRUE OR FALSE?

- 1. Most people have neurotic tenden-
- 2. Neurotics are relatively happy
- The person who always feels sorry for himself, feels abused by others and claims no one appreciates or understands him has an excellent chance of developing a full-blown neurosis.
- 4. Never ask a neurotic person how he feels—he's liable to tell you.
- It's easy for a person to determine the extent to which he is neurotic or well adjusted.
- 6. The United States is the least neu-

ANSWERS

1. True. As one leading psychiatrist has observed: it is the rare person who does not have some tendencies which result in mental and emotional conflicts; however, only in some people diverged in neurosis. Truly neurotic people are described as being constantly in conflict with their environment, fighting their emotional battles on two fronts: inside, as visible in their physical symptoms and personality difficulties; and outside, in their quarrels and obstinacy.

 Palse. In his pen portrait of the typical neurotic. Professor H. J. Eysenck, Director of the Psychological Laboratories at The University of London, describes him with such adjectives as "moody," "touchy" and "restless."

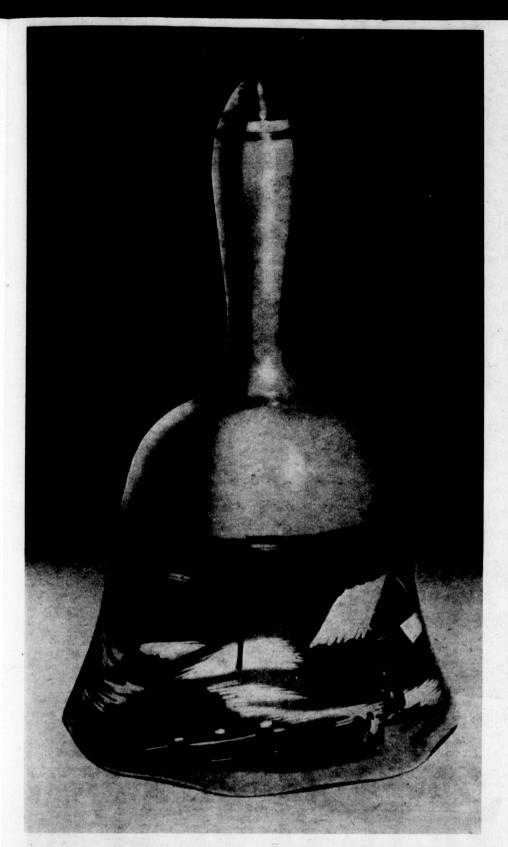

3. True. Studies show that many people develop elaborate neuroses based from these feelings of abuse and claims derived from these feelings. ("I don't know why I should have to take all that abuse from anybody.") Such people make a career of misconstruing remarks and imagining slights and insults.

4. True. In a study conducted by British and American specialists, a question-naire concerning the number of neurotic symptoms experienced during one week was answered by 100 known neurotics and 100 normals, Findings: complaints were reported more frequently in neurotics than normals.

5. True. Psychologist Gardner Murphy suggests: "A well-adjusted personality is one which utilizes effectively and without conflict all that it possesses." In other words, the person with a well-adjusted personality doesn't waste energies on self-doubts and inner conflicts but applies whatever assets he does have to his everyday life. The extent to which he is capable of doing this will provide him with an accurate index of his adjustment.

6. False. A study of national differences in neurouss, sponsored by Britani's Social Science Research Council, showed the nation with the highest incidence of neurosis to be Austria; the least neurotic, Ireland, with the U.S. roughly in middle place.

Dr. David Hartman: "Blindness put my life into focus"

"Everyone is handicapped in some way. My blindness put my life into focus," says Dr. David Hartman, the first blind person to graduate from an American medical school. Rejected by nine schools before being accepted at Temple University (Pa.), David stayed in the top fifth of his class from his first semester. Volunteers taped medical textbooks (700, hours of them) and exams. Instead of identifying slides from a microscope, David recognized them from an oral description. He performed especially well in anatomical dissections because "a lot of surgery is done by touch." After his internship and residency, Dr. Hartman will specialize in psychiatry and rehabilitative medicine. In psychiatry, Hartman feels his blindness may turn out to be an asset. 'Many people feel nervous when a psychiatrist looks at them, as if somehow he has inside information which exposes them. My patients might feel more comfortable."

What Really Makes A Kid "Accident-Prone"?

"Accident-proneness" in children is directly related to the amount of stressful change in their lives, reports a University of Washington research team. In a five-month survey of 103 seventhgrade boys, those who had experienced a high number of such events as suspension from school or a serious illness within the previous year had more than twice as many accidents as those with low life-change patterns. On the other hand, no relationship was demonstrated between high risk-taking behavior and the number of accidents reported.

If Your Head Needs Help

Do you know that the words "psycho-therapist," "psychoanalyst" and "counselor" are not defined by law? Most of these people are legitimate professionals, and may even have medical degrees, but in most states just about anybody can set up shop under one of these classifications with no special training or qualifications. A person called a "psychologist" or "psychiatrist" must meet professional requirements: a psychologist holds a doctorate and has passed state licensing boards; a psychiatrist is a medical doctor who has also met specialty standards and passed state licensing boards. This and other helpful information come from the New York Consultation and Referral Service Inc., a mental-health service staffed by qualified psychiatrists and psychologists. Questions? #### How To Help Improve Children's Television

As a result of growing concern by parents and professionals over the effects of television on youngsters, Action for Children's Television, a group made up of parents and educators, makes these suggestions:

- Talk about TV with your child. Find out what programs, if any, upset him. Discuss ways TV characters could solve problems without violence.
- Look at television with your child. Watch the kind of TV behavior your child tries to imitate. Be sure to point out TV characters who care about others and TV women and men who are competent in a variety of jobs.
- Choose programs with your child. Try to improve children's TV by writing a letter to a local station or a television network. Specify the number of shows your child can watch. And don't hesitate to turn off the set.

Now there's a 10-part dog intelligence test developed and published by school psychologist Cathy Coon, who once thought her dog was the dumbest in the world. Her three-year study of more than 100 dogs showed that most owners had no accurate idea of the intelligence of their pets. On a scale of 0-10 -Very Dumb to Brilliant-the mean test score is 5.75. Purebred hounds scored highest, with a 7.63 average. Toy poodles were worst, with 4.78. Obedience-school dogs were no better than unschooled dogs. Mixed breeds were about as smart as pure breeds. Neither male nor female dogs were significantly smarter. "The Dog Intelligence Test Manual," complete with test, scoresheet and findings, sells for $3 at pet shops and department stores.
